

CURRICULUM
LING 250 LANGUAGE TYPOLOGY
SPRING TERM 2014

a) General curriculum (obligatory):

b)

Croft, William (2003, second edition): Typology and Universals , Cambridge University Press	300p
Hawkins, John (ed.) (1988): Explaining Language Universals , Basil Blackwell	55p
1) Hawkins, John: Explaining Language Universals
2) Hoekstra, Teun og Kooij, Jan: The Innateness Hypothesis
Greenberg, Joseph (ed.) (1963): Universals of Language , MIT Press	84p
1) Hockett, Charles: The Problem of Universals in Language
2) Jakobson, Roman: Implications of Language Universals
3) Greenberg, Joseph: Some Universals of Grammar with Particular Reference to the order of Meaningful Elements
Li, Charles (ed.) (1975): Subject and Topic , Academic Press	60p
1) Keenan, Edward: Towards a Universal Definition of Subject
2) Li, Charles og Sandra Thompson: Subject and Topic: A New Typology of Language
	499p

b) Extra curriculum: Diachronic typology and grammaticalization

Andersen, Øivin. Deverbal nouns, Lexicalization and Syntactic Change. 2007. Nordic Journal of Linguistics 30.1, 55-86. Cambridge University Press. Cambridge.	36 p.
Brinton, Laurel J. and Elizabeth C. Traugott: Lexicalization and Language change . 2005. Chapter 3: The relation of lexicalization to grammaticalization. Cambridge University Press. Cambridge, 2005, p.62-88	26p.
Dunbar, George: Language processing and subjectification. In Kellerman and Morrissey (eds.): Diachrony within synchrony: language history and cognition . 1992. Verlag Peter Lang GmbH, Frankfurt am Main, p. 159-181	22p.
Hopper, Paul J. and Elisabeth C. Traugott: Grammaticalization . 1993. Chapter 5: Unidirectionality. Cambridge University Press, Cambridge, p. 99-139	40p.
Keenan, Edward: Relative clauses. In Shopen (ed): Language typology and syntactic description . 1985. Vol.2: Complex Constructions. The Press Syndicate of the University of Cambridge, Cambridge, p. 141-170	29p

153p

The introductory text book by William Croft (2003, second edition): Typology and Universals, Cambridge University Press, is available at the university book shop.
The rest of the curriculum is available as collections at the book shop.

Øivin Andersen
Emneansvarlig: Erik Andvik